

Shrouk Sami Abdel Jawwad is a Teaching Assistant in the Department of English Language and Literature, specializing in Drama. She is currently pursuing her Master's degree in Literature, with a thesis titled "Overcoming Trauma in Contemporary African Drama: A Study of Selected Nigerian and Zimbabwean Plays." Her research interests include gender-based violence and trauma, as reflected in her paper "Gender-Based Violence and Trauma Recovery in Tosin Jobi Tume's Not That Woman." Shrouk has completed various professional development courses, including scientific writing, international publishing, and effective teaching. She has participated in multiple workshops and conferences, particularly focusing on the applications of artificial intelligence in research, as well as literary studies and dramaturgy.